Order

Sub: Casual approach in preparation of estimate

During a vigilance investigation, it was observed that estimate of exactly same value was used for two different works, although of similar nature, in two different projects of same Area. The tenders for both the locations were floated on the same day also. Exact matching of estimate value for even similar work at two different location is very unlikely. It is possible that the estimate value of one location was used/ copied for floating tender for another location without even assessing the ground requirement.

2. Going for tendering process on basis of such type of estimate when especially one tender for exactly same estimated value has already been floated for some other location may be indicative of deliberately going for tendering process for work which may not be even required. It can also be indicative of preparing estimate without the actual requirement and in a casual manner.

3. It is hereby directed that the tender should be done on basis of estimate as per actual requirement without splitting the work, without any revision in estimate after opening of tender etc.
